Overview

Is double-paned glass suitable for a sunroom?

For a homeowner in a mild climate, double-paned glass may be sufficient to keep a sunroom comfortable. However, tinted glass, which has many of the heat-reducing benefits of Low-E coating, also dims the light that comes into the sunroom. This can be beneficial in sunrooms where people plan to watch television, as it reduces glare.

Why is tempered glass used in sunrooms?

Sunrooms have tempered glass in the windows because it's safer and stronger than standard glass. Tempered glass is used in sunrooms to ensure safety and durability.

Why isn't float glass used in sunroom windows?

Float glass, which is standard glass, is not used in sunroom windows due to its fragility, brittleness, and ability to allow heat from the sun to pass through, warming up the space. When broken, it shatters into small shards and splinters that can penetrate the skin and cause injury or bodily harm.

Does choosing vinyl windows affect a sunroom?

The type of vinyl windows you choose for your sunroom addition can have a big impact on how the sunroom looks and feels. The glass you specify for these windows will affect comfort. Not all window glass is created equal, and for sunrooms, which are made mostly of windows, the glass you choose is especially important.
