Overview

How do Venezuelan schools work?

Authors Catalina Reyes and Maria Andreina Cantele meeting with a school principal in Caracas, Venezuela. An engaged community surrounds these schools, moving extra miles to retain teachers. They self-organize to provide flexibility and support; for example, salaries are supplemented by small cash or in-kind contributions from parents.

Are school meals a luxury in Venezuela?

School meals are not a luxury that all children in Venezuela have. Figuera, the teacher on Margarita Island who fishes to complement her salary, said students in her classroom often stop paying attention quickly because they are hungry or tell her they don't feel well because they haven't eaten.

What happened to Venezuela's education?

Norelys Figueroa, principal of Batalla Naval de Puerto Cabello high school in Ciudad Guayana, has seen first-hand the golden years of Venezuelan education vanish. "Most of the teachers we have are non-specialist," she said. "We don't have enough teachers in areas such as science, maths, physics, and languages."

Does Venezuela have a full education schedule?

However, there was no mention of additional resources for public education, nor were educators' salaries increased, and, in practice, a full schedule remains unattainable. Norelys Figueroa, principal of Batalla Naval de Puerto Cabello high school in Ciudad Guayana, has seen first-hand the golden years of Venezuelan education vanish.
